Does this sound like a child or young person that you know? If the answer’s Yes, this is called private fostering and you should read on.

What is private fostering?

Private fostering is when a child under 16 (under 18 if they’re disabled) lives with an adult who is not a close relative for 28 days or more.

There can be lots of reasons why a child doesn’t live at home and their parent has arranged for someone else to care for them. Maybe . . .

- . . . they’re living with a family friend because their parents are arguing or getting divorced*
- . . . they’ve moved in with the family of their boyfriend or girlfriend*
- . . . their parents work very late and cannot look after them*
- . . . they were sent to this country for education or health reasons and their parents live overseas*

If a child is not living with their parents or a close relative, like a grandparent, brother, sister, uncle or aunt, then the law says Hertfordshire County Council must make sure that it is told about the arrangement by the person looking after the child and the child’s parent.

However, many parents and carers are not aware of this and therefore do not notify the council, even though this is against the law.

What will the council do?

The law says that we need to be told if a child or young person isn’t living with their parents so that we can make sure that they are healthy, safe, happy and doing well.

We will arrange regular visits to check that the child or young person is being well looked after and we can also give help and advice to the carers, parents and the young person.

What do you need to do?

If you are the parent of a child who is being looked after by someone else, or you are looking after someone else’s child you must let the council know.

The law says that we need to be told at least six weeks before the arrangement begins or, in an emergency, within 48 hours. We need to know information about the child and where they are living, who they are living with and we must also be told if the child moves and where they have moved to.

If you know of a child or young person who is not living with their parents, please contact the council’s customer service centre.

We can also give you help and advice if you are involved in a private fostering arrangement.
